

Community guidelines

Welcome!

The Embassy of Good Science wishes to foster an open and respectful scientific debate. We welcome a wide variety of contributions. That said, we would like The Embassy to be a safe space for everyone who visits it. Therefore, we ask our ambassadors and users to follow some simple rules.

It is forbidden to:

- ▶ blame, shame or insult others
- ▶ describe current research misconduct cases or accuse people of misconduct
- ▶ use indecent or inappropriate language
- ▶ publish irrelevant (off-topic) information
- ▶ publish information that is pornographic or erotic (even if legal under applicable law)
- ▶ publish information in violation of copyright or hyperlinks to such information
- ▶ violate the privacy of third parties, for example by distributing their personal data without permission or clear need or the repeated harassment of third parties with unwanted communications
- ▶ publish material which consists of, or contains, software viruses, chain letters, mass mailings or any spam
- ▶ exercise commercial activities

Do anything that violates our community guidelines or, more generally, any violation of our Terms of Service that affects third parties. For more information on our legal policies please consult our privacy, terms of services, and notice and take down policy.

Publication disclaimer

Whenever publishing new content on The Embassy, please be aware that in order to preserve an open and transparent scientific debate and ensure clear versioning and referencing, contributions (unless they violate the terms of service policy) will not be deleted from the platform, even if the author requests the deletion of his/her personal data.